Introduction

Family businesses are under threat from both sides, family as well as business – Rajesh Jain.

The importance of family businesses is becoming increasingly recognised worldwide, they play a key role in today's economy. Nevertheless, the evolution of family businesses cannot be set apart from the evolution of the economic, social and legal environment where the business operates. The notion of "family" also varies from culture to culture and for each different time in history.

It is essential for lawyers working with family-owned businesses to understand the special characteristics of these enterprises.

Family businesses are complex structures, advising their establishment, governance, transfer and inheritance is a challenge for the lawyers; it requires comprehensive knowledge of different fields of laws and skills in other sciences like psychology could be extremely useful, too.

Legal practitioners from all around the world will share their experience about family businesses at the UIA 14th Annual Business Law Forum and will discuss the best practices in different jurisdictions – an event not to miss!

We look forward to seeing you in Budapest!

Family Succession Planning: Wills, Trusts, Hopes and Other Estate-Planning Manners.

The reality of family business succession – paving the way for a smooth transition or heading toward disaster?

One of the most conflicting times in the lifespan of a family business is its succession. Only 15% of family businesses manage to reach the third generation. The most common reason for this being ill-advised or sub-par planning for the succession of the business. This panel will focus on specific case studies in each jurisdiction, especially those with an international perspective or slant. 12:30 – 14:00 LUNCH

14:00 – 15:00 SESSION 3 – TAX LAW

(Re-)Structuring family businesses in a tax efficient manner.

Increased complexity and globalization of the economy has led to more sophisticated forms of organisation for family business. Individuals and family offices must revisit their wealth and corporate structures from a tax perspective to make sure that they are aligned with current businesses and new forms of investment demands, without losing tax efficiency. This session will focus on all the relevant aspects for a tax-efficient structure for cash flows (e.g., dividends and capital gains), new investments, leadership succession, wealth tax and estate tax in a globalized economy. Besides tax aspects, implementing a wealth structure that provides for an effective asset protection strategy is of the utmost importance. Business succession is of critical importance and difficult tax and cross border legal issues arise from the tendency for families to become more international and where the founder wishes that only certain family members inherit the business. All these aspects and their business and legal implications will be covered in this panel by specialized tax lawyers from a global perspective.

MODERATOR & SPEAKER: ▪ Marti ADROER, President of the UIA Tax Law Commission, Cuatrecasas, Barcelona, Spain

15:00 – 16:00 SESSION 4 – CORPORATE / M&A

Is it necessary to approach family businesses differently?

Shareholders agreements in family businesses, managing shareholder relationships.

One of the struggles in family businesses is the need for institutionalisation to remain sustainable and secure succession, as well as to prevent or minimising the fields and effects of disagreements between family members in decision making. What can be the proper form of institutionalisation and when to start? What can be efficient and binding legal instruments to have binding effect and sanctioning power over the relevant family members if necessary. One solution can be the shareholders' agreements like in all other businesses.

Holding of Family Business – Ownership structuring.

The holding of a family business by many family members can be achieved by various types of vehicles and ownership structures (e.g. investment funds and companies, partnerships, unit trusts). Depending on the needs of the family or the wishes of the founder(s), such vehicles may emphasize on the preservation of the business for the future generations, the governance and the control of the business or the possibility to create liquidity and transfers among family members.

The panel will examine different type of vehicles used to hold family business and their advantages in different jurisdictions, including the increasing impact of financial regulations on such structuring.
